Harry Potter

Harry Potter is my favorite superhero. Harry's parents both died when he was a baby. Voldemort had murdered them. Harry, however, didn't die, but got a scar shaped like a bolt of lightning on his forehead. After his parents died, Hogwarts professors and Hagrid brought him to his aunt and uncle's house. His aunt and uncle and son, Dudley were not the nicest. They made Harry sleep in a cupboard beneath the stairs. They would make him do all of the chores and cleaning. When it came to people coming over, Harry would either be lock in his room the whole time, or he would have to deal with someone who's mean to him. Then one day, when Harry and the rest of them were sleeping in an old hut, a huge man came through. It was Hagrid. He knew it was Harry's birthday and gave him a cake. He said,''You're a wizard Harry.''

Harry doesn't have a costume. He does have a wand. He wears glasses and he has a scar shaped like a bolt of lightning on his forehead beneath his black hair. The villain in Harry Potter is Voldemort. Voldemort is quite scary looking with a pale nose less face.   He murdered Harry's parents and is now trying to do so with him. Voldemort has a snake named Nagini that helps him do evil.

Harry doesn't really have powers like a superhero.   He can see what Voldemort sees and he has part of Voldemort's soul in him. As a wizard, Harry can do spells and stuff like that but every witch and wizard can do that. You could say one of his powers is not letting the past get to him in ways that make him weaker they help him in way that make him stronger (wow that was deep).

The reason I picked Harry Potter is because even though he's the chosen one and the one who lived he doesn't want the fame. He doesn't like people who love him because he's the chosen one. He doesn't like how people admire him because of what happened. Harry Potter doesn't like all the attention. He really just wants to be a normal wizard.