

The Martian Manhunter

On Mars J'onn J'onzz was a manhunter (their version of police). He is the last martian because his race died from a telepathic plague. He was then brought to Earth by scientist Dr. Erdel. He adopted Earth as his home planet and taking the form of different humans. Eventually, he went public and became a valuable hero in The Justice League. The Martian Manhunter became one of the most trusted heroes especially in the Pacific Region. Then after a several events, where he felt he failed his friends, he decided to stick with the Denver private detective John Jones.

The Martian Manhunter has quite a few powers. His mental powers are genius-level intellect, which means an IQ of over 140; nine senses; telepathy, which is mentally talking; and telekinesis, which is moving objects with your mind. His physical powers are superhuman strength, speed, durability, and endurance, regenerative factor, flight, invulnerability, phasing which is passing through solid objects, invisibility, shapeshifting, and martian vision which are like heat lasers.

The Martian Manhunter has three different forms. His human form is the African-American private detective John Jones. In his hero form he is green with purple boots, pants, and a purple cape. He also has a martian form where he is green with a long, pointed head.

The Martian Manhunter has one weakness, and that is fire. This weakness is a genetic weakness that his whole race had, but he has learned how to conquer his weakness. He also has some villains as well. These are Malefic J'onn's brother and creator of the plague that wiped out martians, D'Kay D'Razz, Mr. V the leader of the mafia Vulture, Bette Noir a telepathic monster that takes the form of a woman, and Cay'an.

In summary, The Martian Manhunter is a powerful superhero with not a lot of weaknesses. I think that he is cool because of how much he can do, but I don't get how heat lasers are a good idea when your only weakness is fire.