Jennifer Lawrence was born on August 15, 1990, in Louisville, Kentucky. They owned a farm near the city. She has two older brothers named Blaine and Ben, and her parents are Karen and Gary. When she was little, she was very athletic. She did cheerleading, field hockey, and softball. When Jennifer was younger she thought she wanted to be a doctor when she grew up.

On a spring break vacation to New York, someone asked Jennifer for her picture and her mom's phone number. the next day he called her and wanted to meet up with them to see if she would like to model or act.After that she stayed in New York for the whole summer. During that time she acting in commercials as well as in a couple of movies. Jennifer was nominated for Academy Awards and Golden Globe awards.

Jennifer Lawrence is a very kind person. She donates a lot of money to different kinds of charities. A few of them are Feeding America, The Thirst Project, and Screen Actors Guild Foundation. She also goes to visit children's hospitals all around the world. She recently visited a children's hospital in Canada. Jennifer organized an early screening for the Hunger Games: Catching Fire, to raise some money for Saint Mary's Center in her home town. It's a special disability organization. she raised more than $40,000.

Jennifer Lawrence is a very strong woman, but everyone has their weakness. Her weakness is standing up for herself. on one of the sets she says that Liam Hemsworth was teaching her how to stand up for herself and other people too.

My overall opinion on Jennifer Lawrence is that she is very generous and is always willing to help out and donate money. She likes visiting hospitals near her home town to make the patients happier .
