CHAPTER 2

Classes

Jake's first class is Spanish. He never liked Spanish because the Spanish teacher is crazy. His teacher loves reptiles. He made a room of his house to be a reptile room. He tells us about his reptiles. His reptiles are like his kid to him. All of the girls think that reptiles are gross and scary. He has 6 snakes, 2 geckos, 1 Chinese water dragon, and an alligator. Jake gets homework every night and a test every week. Jake once forgot about the test and he got a D+ but then he asked if he could retake but before asking he talked with him about reptiles. So he gave him a chance to retake the test. Now Jake really reads about reptiles a lot so that he can get away with things that others can't. He gets out of class and he starts walking down the hallway to get to science. He walks by Sam Hope and his crew. They are the big football players here and they try to get him to do his homework. He is probably the dumbest kid in the school but the only reason he got here is because he got a full ride for football from his hometown Appleton North. He is jealous that Jake can actually finish a math problem. He always picked on Jake for playing soccer because they think that it is a guy sport. He would always call him a lawn fairy and a wimp. He's just a jealous jerk and he is so stupid to know that there are more people that play soccer than just the US.

There best come back is that there is lots of people that play because it's a cheap sport.

Jake said, "just because it is a cheaper sport than football doesn't mean that it's not good, it's a pride sport."

So they left him alone and Jake walked away. Jake went to the next 3 classes. the classes are Science, Math and then Social Studies. He goes to Science than Math and then Social Studies.
