

London in Action

Some people say London was a traveler the minute she was born. Why? Because from the minute she was born she ran to an Airport and caught a flight to London.

As she grew up she went to many states, and countries. Two years later she visited all 50 states and Australia three times!

So, she thought, and she thought, and she decided to retire from being a traveling. So, she went back home and her last flight from LAX to Appleton a wing fell off. BAM! "Oh no!" yelled some people on the plane. "Don't worry," said

London, "I'll fix it." So she jumped on the wing. And the wind was as loud as 50 marching bands. Then London fixed the wing and all the people on the plane were saved. Since that flight people have said that London moved into the woods and others say that she died. But no one knows.
